

10-24-2018 Town Council Meeting Responses

ITEM #10: Receive the Affordable Housing Quarterly Report for Fiscal Year 2019, Quarter 1

Council Question: To put the numbers on the chart on p. 208 in context, does staff know what percent of the town's population has an income below 30% of AMI and what percent below 80% AMI?

Staff Response: The Federal Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) sets the Area Median Income (AMI) annually. However, the data on household income is based on American Community Survey data and the income levels shown in that data do not directly align with the AMI levels established by HUD. We have provided the data for additional information. Table 1 below is the breakdown of Area Median Income published by HUD for 2018. Table 2 below, is the American Community Survey data on household income.

While the two data sets do not align to allow comparisons that determine exactly how many households fall into each AMI grouping, we do see there are approximately 4,400 households (22% of households) making less than $25,000, which is considered Extremely Low Income for a family of four. There also approximately 8,400 households (42% of households) making less than $50,000, or 80% of AMI for a family of 2.

Council Question: Can you ask staff to take a minute during the presentation to explain WHY a community's median home value might be different from the median listing price, why that is an indicator worth looking at (what is it indicating other than that homes sell for more than they are worth?) and what communities "do" about it?

Staff Response: Chapel Hill's median home value is currently listed at $371,400 and the median listing price for homes is $467,854. This difference could indicate the Chapel Hill housing market is a seller's market and sellers are at least listing, and likely, selling their homes at a higher price than what might be considered the true value of the home. An additional reason to track this data is it can be an indicator of the trajectory of the housing market. If homes are being sold at higher prices than the current value, this can be an indication that home values are increasing.

Council Question: Currently 43% of our housing is affordable to folks at under 80% AMI. during presentation, can staff compare that to a) what our % was 5 years ago and any other comparisons that may be helpful but also reasonable to get by Wednesday (other communities Carrboro or Cary maybe Charlottesville % affordable at 80% of their AMI?) Basically I am feeling good about that number (still work to do, but seems like we have come quite a way) and am wondering if actually no, we are still a long way off from where we want to be, way behind other communities, etc. Feel like I need some context for this number to wrap my head around it.

Staff Response: Please see an updated version of the Affordable Housing Quarterly Report (AHQR) attached, which reflects two updates to the data included in the Community Indicators section:

- The percentage of housing affordable for households with an income below 80% of the AMI is 39%. The earlier draft report included affordable homeownership units from 80 – 100% AMI, and we have now removed that from the data reported for the indicator.

10-24-2018 Town Council Meeting Responses

- Total affordable units has been updated accordingly to also remove homeownership units affordable to households between 80% and 100% AMI, in order to be consistent with the numbers included in last year's community indicators. The total number of units affordable to households below 80% AMI is 8,469.

The data that is used to identify the number of affordable units for households under 80% AMI includes data on naturally occurring affordable housing (NOAH) and subsidized affordable housing. The Town only gained access to NOAH data last year and does not have access to data for prior years. As a result, it is not possible to accurately determine what our percentage was five years ago. We will investigate whether this data is available from other jurisdictions, and will provide that to Council as we are able to locate it.
