Historic District Commission Purpose & Priorities

What is the purpose of the HDC?

What are the priorities of the HDC?

What does the HDC need to be effective?

What are some policy areas the HDC would like to consider?

The Historic District Commission (HDC) identified several policy and action items they are interested in pursuing. They want to establish transitions between different densities and land uses, extending transitional areas to all neighborhoods, and clarifying their role in the process regarding transitional areas through specific language in the Land Use Management Ordinance (LUMO) rewrite.

The HDC was also interested in improving communication and celebrating the diverse histories of Chapel Hill. They wanted to form and improve partnerships with existing community organizations and groups to highlight significant buildings, events, and individuals that have played a pivotal role in shaping the community's past. The HDC wanted to foster increased community engagement and investment in the preservation of the Town's history. They aspired for community members to be able to articulate the connection between historic preservation and Chapel Hill's history. The Commissioners envisioned themselves as community conveners and leaders, actively seeking collaboration opportunities and promoting the recognition and sharing of various histories beyond the historic districts. There was interest in working alongside existing organizations and groups to further disseminate knowledge about the town's history.

The Commission wanted to enhance the detail and application of the Design Standards. They wanted to revisit the removal of the "A through J" criteria from the LUMO to improve the effectiveness of the standards and provide predictability for applicants. They wanted clearer expectations for applicants and more flexibility for Commission members. The HDC also expressed interest in tree conservation and replanting efforts, as well as considering de-designating areas within the local historic district boundaries that lack historic resources.

Wrap Up & Next Steps

What are the next steps?

Who will be responsible?

Going forward, staff and the HDC officers will develop an initial survey to determine the interests of individual commission members in exploring the topics above further.
